VISHU TOLAN

Dear colleagues and friends,

We started a 2022 loaded with badminton, with the participation of our athletes in various tournaments around the world and standing out in our continental tournaments.

Congratulations to Canada and the United States, teams that led our Pan Am Male & Female Cup, and thanks to the Mexican Federation for hosting this high-level event.

Para badminton athletes have represented the region very well in various tournaments, in addition to sharing an athletes camp in Brazil seeking to be better each time. Excellent!

El Salvador saw the return of Kevin Cordon and Michelle Li to the top of the Pan American podium. Without a doubt, the 25th edition of our Pan Am Individual Championship was a surprising tournament due to the high level of our athletes. Thanks to the Federation of El Salvador for accepting the challenge of organizing this tournament and showing a great job in it.

We continue to provide tools to our coaches through our well-known Coach Corner program, follow-up to the Shuttle Time courses throughout the region, and we also seek to train new coaches with the BWF Fasttrack courses.

Strategic alliances with Special Olympics and AGITOS allow us to continue promoting our sport with AirBadminton activations and Para badminton camps, respectively.

Finally I want to highlight the tremendous privilege of being able to see so many of you at the BWF and BPAC Annual Assembly. Greet you, talk and realize that each one of us continues to uphold the same commitment: to keep the Pan Am Shuttle in the air.

Thank you all for being part of Badminton Pan Am and for the work you do for the development of badminton in the region.

We count on you!

Vishu Tolan.

BEIWEN ZHANG

Unfazed by injury nightmare, Beiwen happy to be back

Beiwen Zhang is still cheerful.

If the hurt from Tokyo 2020 lingers – she ruptured her left Achilles on the biggest stage of her career – it isn't easily apparent. She even jokes about it.

"Both my Achilles are pretty bad," she chuckles. "The good sign is that I've only broken one!"

One of the most vivid images from Tokyo 2020 was of Zhang being wheeled out from her Round of 16 match against He Bing Jiao. Zhang had taken the opening game in quick time and was looking strong for a quarterfinal place, but her hopes were to go up in smoke in seconds as she fell to the floor with a ruptured Achilles.

"I didn't really see that coming. When I touched my Achilles there was nothing, like my foot just went down... I tried to stand up, I couldn't," she recalls.

For a player who was entirely self-made, and had orchestrated her own training over the years before qualifying to Tokyo, the abrupt end to her campaign seemed a cruel twist of fate. Beiwen talks of the episode matter-of-factly, sometimes even throwing in a humorous line or two.

Beiwen Zhang todavía está alegre.

Si el dolor de Tokio 2020 persiste (se rompió el tendón de Aquiles izquierdo en el escenario más importante de su carrera), no es evidente. Incluso bromea al respecto.

"Mis dos tendones de Aquiles están bastante mal", se ríe. "La buena señal es que solo he roto uno!"

Una de las imágenes más vívidas de Tokio 2020 fue la de Zhang saliendo de su partido de octavos de final contra He Bing Jiao. Zhang se había llevado el juego inicial en poco tiempo y se veía fuerte para un lugar en los cuartos de final, pero sus esperanzas se esfumaron en segundos cuando cayó al suelo con un tendón de Aquiles roto.

"Realmente no lo vi venir. Cuando me toqué el tendón de Aquiles no había nada, como si el pie se me hubiera caído... Traté de ponerme de pie, no pude", recuerda.

Para una jugadora que se hizo completamente a sí misma y había orquestado su propio entrenamiento a lo largo de los años antes de clasificarse para Tokio, el abrupto final de su campaña parecía un cruel giro del destino. Beiwen habla del episodio con naturalidad, a veces incluso lanzando una o dos líneas humorísticas.

"I was feeling sad that I couldn't finish the match. I'd prepared for so long. I could accept losing but I couldn't accept losing this way. I have been injured before, like I've had torn muscles and everything, but I was able to finish the match. But this way, being carried out of the court... it was hard to accept in that moment."

Even the pain she felt on court was dwarfed immediately after, when she was tended to in the medical room, when she felt like "someone was just chopping off my leg".

Surgery and rehab followed. Now, seven and a half months after that episode, Zhang is at the YONEX All England, on the eve of her comeback (she faces Kirsty Gilmour in the first round). For a self-funded athlete — she bore a percentage of the costs of surgery, and all the costs of rehab — to make that journey speaks of something beyond just grim determination. Her doctors said it was the quickest recovery they'd ever seen in an athlete for such an injury.

Rather paradoxically, the emotion Zhang conveys most is happiness — happiness at being able to play. There is no hint of regret or bitterness; her sense of humour is unchanged.

"I think I faced up to my situation pretty quick. I was only sad for a week. And I was like, fine. I don't care. So I think, first, the most important part is that you have to be happy. You can't be sad or worry about this all the time."

Did she never ask "why me?" after all the effort she'd put in to getting to the Olympics?

"No, I didn't think about that because even if we're all going the same way the end result will be different. And we're facing different situations too. So I'm okay with what my situation is today."

"You find a way to make yourself happy. The more you do it the easier it is. So I think the biggest shock for me happened at the Olympics but I just took a week to recover mentally and to get ready. Sometimes it's good to be sad, because... you will find a way to be back."

And while she's at the All England, she has set herself no expectations. She's just happy to be back.

"I've been training for two weeks. I'm not here because I have to achieve something. First, I want to come to tournaments, I want to enjoy it. And secondly, I want to see where my level is right now. And then (to find) what should I improve for my leg."

"You know, I'm happy that the job I do is what I love."

Text by BWF

"Me sentía triste por no poder terminar el partido. Me había preparado durante tanto tiempo. Podría aceptar perder, pero no podría aceptar perder de esta manera. He estado lesionado antes, como si tuviera músculos desgarrados y todo, pero pude terminar el partido. Pero de esta manera, ser sacado de la cancha... fue difícil de aceptar en ese momento."

Incluso el dolor que sintió en la cancha fue empequeñecido inmediatamente después, cuando la atendían en la sala médica, cuando sintió que "alguien me estaba cortando la pierna".

Jugar. No hay indicios de arrepentimiento o amargura; su sentido del humor no ha cambiado.

"Creo que enfrenté mi situación bastante rápido. Solo estuve triste una semana. Y yo estaba como, bien. No importa. Entonces creo que, primero, la parte más importante es que tienes que ser feliz. No puedes estar triste o preocuparte por esto todo el tiempo".

¿Nunca preguntó "¿por qué yo?" después de todo el esfuerzo que había hecho para llegar a los Juegos Olímpicos?

"No, no pensé en eso porque incluso si todos vamos por el mismo camino, el resultado final será diferente. Y también nos enfrentamos a situaciones diferentes. Así que estoy bien con cuál es mi situación hoy."

"Encuentras una manera de hacerte feliz. Cuanto más lo haces, más fácil es. Así que creo que el mayor impacto para mí ocurrió en los Juegos Olímpicos, pero solo me tomó una semana recuperarme mentalmente y prepararme. A veces es bueno estar triste, porque... encontrarás la manera de volver."

Y mientras está en el All England, no se ha puesto expectativas. Ella está feliz de estar de vuelta.

"Llevo dos semanas entrenando. No estoy aquí porque tengo que lograr algo. Primero, quiero venir a los torneos, quiero disfrutarlo. Y en segundo lugar, quiero ver dónde está mi nivel en este momento. Y luego (encontrar) qué debo mejorar para mi pierna."

"Sabes, estoy feliz de que el trabajo que hago es lo que amo".

An AirBadminton Activation was held for the first time during the 2022 Special Olympics USA Games in Orlando from 4-8 June, with the aim of growing badminton in the country and making it a permanent fixture of the multi-sport event.

A total of 5,500 athletes and coaches from 63 delegations took part in the activity, a collaboration between Special Olympics North America, Special Olympics International, USA Badminton, Badminton Pan American Confederation and Badminton World Federation.

Featured as a "come and try" activity in the Athletes Village at Disney's All-Star Sports Resort, an outdoor space was allocated for participants to try AirBadminton. Exhibition matches of 3 vs 3, 2 vs 2 and 1 vs 1 took place, where AirShuttle 2.0 was used.

Se llevó a cabo una Activación de AirBadminton por primera vez durante los Juegos de Olimpiadas Especiales de EE.UU. 2022 en Orlando del 4 al 8 de junio, con el objetivo de hacer crecer el bádminton en el país y convertirlo en un elemento permanente del evento multideportivo.

Un total de 5.500 atletas y entrenadores de 63 delegaciones participaron en la actividad, una colaboración entre Special Olympics North America, Special Olympics International, USA Badminton, Badminton Pan American Confederation y Badminton World Federation.

Presentado como una actividad de "ven y prueba" en la Villa de Atletas en Disney's All-Star Sports Resort, se asignó un espacio al aire libre para que los participantes probaran AirBadminton. Se llevaron a cabo partidos de exhibición de 3 vs 3, 2 vs 2 y 1 vs 1, donde se utilizó AirShuttle 2.0.

Participants were also introduced to the inclusive and free BWF resources of the Shuttle Time Schools Programme and AirBadminton.

As part of the event's legacy, AirShuttles, rackets and AirBadminton equipment were donated to Florida, Texas, New York and a representative of the Bahamas.

It was great to see the sport bringing people together, reinforcing the motto that AirBadminton can be played anywhere, anytime and by anyone. It also helped bring more awareness of the outdoor game to USA and the USA Special Olympics Games family.

Feedback indicates participants and local authorities are now looking forward to having badminton on the programme of the 2024 Special Olympics USA Games in Minnesota.

Los participantes también conocieron los recursos inclusivos y gratuitos de BWF del programa Shuttle Time Schools y AirBadminton.

Como parte del legado del evento, se donaron AirShuttles, raquetas y equipos de AirBadminton a Florida, Texas, Nueva York y un representante de las Bahamas.

Fue genial ver que el deporte une a la gente, reforzando el lema de que AirBadminton se puede jugar en cualquier lugar, en cualquier momento y por cualquier persona. También ayudó a generar más conciencia sobre el juego al aire libre en EE.UU. y en la familia de los Juegos de Olimpiadas Especiales de EE.UU.

Los comentarios indican que los participantes y las autoridades locales ahora esperan tener bádminton en el programa de los Juegos de Olimpiadas Especiales 2024 en Minnesota, EEUU.
